Support in Mind Scotland (SiMS) has been supporting people with poor mental health in Scotland for nearly 50 years. SiMS looks after up to 1,500 people every week, 80% of whom are in rural Scotland and has a workforce of around 120 dedicated people who believe anyone affected by mental health issues deserves compassionate and expert support.

Support in Mind Scotland work in the partnership organisation Mental Health UK with Rethink (England), Hafal (Wales) and Mindwise (Northern Ireland)

Around 1 million people live in rural Scotland and 98% of Scotland's land mass is defined as rural. Scottish Government classifies rural Scotland as populations of 3,000 or less. In addition, "Remote rural" is classified as living in a population of less than 3,000 and more than a half hour's drive from a population of more than 10,000. "Accessible rural" is classified as living in a population of less than 3,000 and less than a half hour's drive from a population of more than 10,000

Investing in addressing mental health at the earliest point, pre-crisis, is crucial to prevent people's mental health worsening and to improving the wellbeing of our nation..

Scottish Government Mental Health Strategy: 2017-2027

Rural Communities

The challenge presented by isolation is keenly felt by many in our rural communities. The National Rural Mental Health Forum has been established to help people in rural areas maintain good mental health and wellbeing.

This forum will help develop connections between communities across rural Scotland, so that isolated people can receive support when and where they need it.

Action 12: Support the further development of the National Rural Mental Health Forum to reflect the unique challenges presented by rural isolation.

“There may also be specific issues around access to services and support for those living in remote and rural communities.”
